Q 12	Read the extract and answer questions The material aspects of globalization, such as advancements in transportation, communication, and the economy, have progressed significantly throughout human history. The most recent developments include the first, second, third, and now the fourth industrial revolution, the electronic revolution. Alongside these material changes, the ideological aspects of globalization, such as the spread of human rights, have also progressed considerably since the French Revolution. These material and ideological factors impact both the global stage and individual countries. Many believe that globalization plays a key role in transforming welfare states into more competitive states, as increasing investment and trade lead national economies to compete more directly with one another. a. Is globalization a source of order or disorder in world politics? Are you persuaded by the liberal view that globalization creates the conditions for a more stable world order? Why or why not? b. Define the nature of the International Political Economy. What are the prominent factors of economic globalization?	25	CO4
Q 13	Do International Organizations need radical reform? What specific reforms should the United Nations implement to address its inefficiencies in dealing with contemporary global issues, such as global health, armed conflicts, and inequality, and how can these changes ensure more inclusive and equitable decision-making processes?	25	CO3
